

Counseling Kids with Emotional and Behavioral Problems in the Schools

By Mary N. Cook, Kathy Weldon

Love Publishing Co. Paperback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, Counseling Kids with Emotional and Behavioral Problems in the Schools, Mary N. Cook, Kathy Weldon, "Counseling Kids With Emotional and Behavioral Problems in the Schools" is a comprehensive text on counseling in a user-friendly format that makes it a joy for those who work with children with emotional and behavioral problems. Cook and Weldon explore different emotional and behavioral problems and the children that exhibit them, including children who are depressed, unsafe, socially impaired, anxious, selectively mute, school-refusing, disruptive or ADHD, and difficult. The book also examines working with classes or groups, as well as crisis intervention from the counselor's perspective. Categorized by emotional or behavioral difficulty, each chapter dissects the epidemiology and major characteristics of the problem, assessment techniques, and interventions. The text relates countless scenarios, dialogues, and case studies and provides activities, games, and sample behavioral contracts to be used by counselors, teachers, and parents. It: provides essential information and statistics about each emotional or behavioral problem; emphasizes practical and usable strategies to effect change in children; and includes three appendices with more than 40 black-line masters to be used around the office, classroom, or home.
