Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from A Year and a Day: Westwood Village, Westwood Hills And there, in the midst of the hills, filling a wide field of the green campagna that sloped toward the sea, I came upon an amazing stretch of new tomato vines. Gardeners were at work, bent to pleasant toil in the joyous morning. Soon there would be red vine apples for soups and salads in the roaring town, with the old matchless flavor of San Jose de Buenos Aires in them. Sped then upon Time s swift wings a year - one little, fleeting year, that was come and gone so soon that it seemed scarcely to have been at all. And then I went back again to the Rancho San Jose de Buenos Aires. I went back to behold a change of which I had been told - a change that men said was like a miracle. Where my beloved vineyard of the tomatoes had been there arose before my eyes a lovely city of domes and tiled roofs, luring porticos and cloistered arcades that stood like a Phoenician dream on either side of wide, sunlit streets. And it was within the little sweep of just a year and a day that this almost unbelievable transformation had come to pass. It is of Westwood Village that I am speaking, newest of the new cities of California of the South, and in every way the most remarkable of them all. When I returned to see again the rolling hills, in the clasp of which was my vast and well-beloved tomato field, there was no time for pangs of regret. The amazement that swept me and the...
