GAO reviewed the draft strategic plan submitted by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) as required by the Government Performance and Results Act. GAO noted that: (1) to its credit, NASA has been actively pursuing a strategic planning process since 1992, before enactment of the Results Act; (2) of the six elements required by the act, four are included in the draft strategic plan--a mission statement, goals and objectives, strategies for achieving the goals and objectives, and a discussion of external factors (discussed in the context of NASAs environmental assessment); (3) two of those four elements have weaknesses, some more significant than others; (4) the other elements--relating annual performance goals to general goals and objectives and a description of program evaluations used to establish general goals and objectives and a schedule for future program evaluations--are not explained in enough detail in the draft plan itself; (5) the draft plan sets forth NASAs primary legislative mandate, the National Aeronautics and Space Act, as well as other key statutory authorities of the agency; (6) for example, as discussed in the plan, the...

Reviews

This book is definitely not simple to begin on studying but quite fun to see. I actually have read and that i am sure that i will gonna read through yet again once again in the foreseeable future. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.
