STRENGTH TESTS. Apparatus.--An improved Fairbanks shot machine is used for the tension tests, and a 40,000-pound capacity oil-pressure hand-operated machine, shown in Pl. III, A (p. 22), is used for the compression tests. The transverse tests are made either on the 10,000-pound wire tester, which is fitted with transverse tools, or on a long-lever 2,000pound Tinius Olsen Co. machine with a special bearing made by the same company, as shown in Pl. III, C. When transverse specimens are being tested, the heavy counterpoise is replaced by a light wooden one loaded with shot. This requires a greater movement of the poise to balance the same load, and thus permits the small loads sustained by the beams to be more accurately measured than with the original counterpoise. Methods.--The methods recommended by the special committee on uniform methods of the American Society of Civil Engineers are used in the mixing and molding. The test pieces are placed in the testing machine upon their sides (with reference to the position in which they are molded). Computations.--The only computations necessary are those for obtaining the unit strengths from the gross loads read at the machine and the averages of the three tests in each case. DENSITY TESTS. Apparatus.--The implements used in the density tests are shown in Pl. VIII, A. Two sizes of molds are used in order to determine which size gives the more uniform results. After this has been decided,...
